Islamabad: The Supreme Court's constitutional bench has decided to conduct daily hearings on the case regarding the implementation of the super tax.

According to media, a five-member constitutional bench of the Supreme Court, led by Justice Aminuddin Khan, heard the case against the imposition of the super tax. However, due to the unavailability of senior lawyer Makhdoom Ali Khan, the hearing has been postponed until April 15.

During the hearing, lawyer Shehzad Ata Elahi informed the court that the Lahore High Court had also transferred tax-related cases to the Supreme Court that were unrelated to the super tax.

Justice Aminuddin Khan stated that if cases were incorrectly transferred from high courts, a list should be submitted so that they could be sent back. He further remarked that from April 15 onward, hearings would be held daily without any adjournments.
